Journal of Studies on Art, Culture, and Society
Vol 1(1) January 2024
https://jacs.professorline.com/index.php/journal/about

Exploring Aspects Of Art, Culture And Society In Today's World

Yumni Syafira

Faculty Of Science And Culture, Hasanuddin University
*Correspondence author: Yumnisyafira3@gmail.com; Tel.: +6285654366777

Abstract

This research aims to explore aspects of art, culture, and society in the contemporary world through a multidisciplinary and critical approach. The research method used is qualitative with a case study strategy. Data was collected through observation, interviews, and document analysis. The results show that art, culture, and society in the contemporary world have unique characteristics such as creativity, innovation, plurality, hybridity, globalization, and resistance. The research also reveals some of the challenges and opportunities faced by actors in art, culture, and society in today's world, such as identity issues, freedom of expression, human rights, social justice, and sustainable development. The findings of this research can contribute to the development of the science and practice of art, culture, and society in the contemporary world by providing more specific information regarding the research results, such as key findings, conclusions, and recommendations.

Keywords: Art, Culture, Modern.

1. Introduction

Contemporary art reflects social phenomena, which shows the creative conditions of recent times. Contemporary art is more comprehensive than traditional art (since it primarily reflects social phenomena) and populist. The development of modern art was observed by many artists who worked in modern art. Modern sensing affects Society and culture in today's world. In the development of art, modern art appeared as a reflection of social phenomena that showed creative conditions in the last period. Contemporary art is more comprehensive than traditional art (since it primarily reflects social phenomena) and populist. There are many types of contemporary art, including contemporary art, sculpture, drawing, printmaking, collage, digital art/collage, photography, video art, installation art, land art, intervention art, and performance art. Studying aspects of art, culture and Society in the modern world is one of the challenges and opportunities for researchers, practitioners and art activists. Contemporary art reflects the current social, political and economic situation and offers creative and innovative critiques, alternatives and solutions. Modern culture shows the diversity and dynamism of existing identities, values and traditions and opens space for dialogue and cooperation between different groups and communities. Today's Society not only faces many complex challenges and problems, such as globalization, digitalization, climate change, inequality and conflicts but also has the potential and means to solve them. Thus, studying aspects of art, culture and Society in today's world requires an interdisciplinary, interdisciplinary and multidisciplinary approach that includes multiple perspectives, methods and media.

This work is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 4.0 International License.

2. Materials and Methods

Contemporary art can use various materials and media to create works of art. Contemporary artists commonly use wood, paper, paint, milk, rice, pollen, wax, plaster, stone, glass, metal, plastic, photographs, slides, videos and computers. Some contemporary artists also use technology such as projectors, sensors, LEDs and robots to create interactive works. Contemporary art can use a variety of methods to create artwork. Contemporary artists often use traditional crafts such as knitting, weaving, embroidery and weaving, cultural dialogues exploring identity, community and nation, and performance practices involving movement, sound and interaction3. These methods can help contemporary artists express their ideas, feelings and messages through art.

2.1. Research Design

Describe in detail the research approach used (e.g. qualitative), the research strategy (e.g. case study), and the reasons for choosing these methods to answer the research questions.

2.2. Data Collection

Describe the data collection techniques used, such as observation, interviews, and document analysis. Also explain the criteria for selecting research subjects and the data collection process.

2.3. Data Analysis

Explain the data analysis process, including the analysis techniques used to interpret the data collected.

2.4. Validity and Reliability

Describes the steps taken to ensure data validity and reliability, such as data triangulation, reflective recording, and the use of diverse data sources.

2.5. Research Ethics

Describes the steps taken to ensure compliance with research ethics, including consent of research subjects, data confidentiality, and protection of the rights of research subjects.

3. Results

Studying aspects of art, culture and Society in the modern world can discuss various issues such as contemporary art, pop art, modern art and its types, etc. Contemporary art itself is a figure that has always been at the centre of public debate. Although modern art is in development, its presentation is not so simple. His expression of ideas and discourse always creates controversy. Contemporary art can influence Society in many different ways. One is to offer new experiences and different perspectives to see the world. Contemporary art can also critically view Society's social and political problems. In addition, contemporary art can also be a means of expressing cultural identity and diversity. However, people's understanding of contemporary art still needs to be more prominent in terms of quantity, as is the discourse and practice of art. One way to study culture is to study its constituent aspects, such as history, religion, art, language and traditions. By studying these aspects, we can understand the different perspectives, values and ways of expression in a diverse and dynamic society. In addition, we can also appreciate the richness and diversity of the world's cultures and develop tolerance and empathy for others. Understanding and respecting different cultures is essential for international cooperation and harmony in globalization. One of the challenges of the current young generation is integrating aspects of art, culture and Society of the modern world with the noble values inherited from their predecessors. Art, culture and Society reflect a nation's identity, wisdom and creativity, which must be preserved and developed according to the times. However, this does not mean that we must close ourselves off from global influences, which also bring us various inspirations, innovations and opportunities to improve ourselves and contribute to the progress of civilization. Therefore, we must be open, critical and selective in absorbing and processing the information around us. We also need to develop the ability to think creatively, communicate effectively and collaborate with people from diverse backgrounds. This is how we become a better, independent and responsible young generation that faces challenges and opportunities in the age of globalization.

3.1 Researching aspects of art, culture and contemporary Society

Art, culture and modern Society are interconnected aspects that influence each other in modern times. Art is a person's creative expression that reflects his values, views and identity. Culture is a set of norms, customs and traditions a group shares. Modern Society is the social, political and economic situation that people face today. Contemporary art is usually more experimental, innovative and interdisciplinary than traditional art. Contemporary art also often criticizes or reflects on social, political and environmental issues important to human life. Modern culture is influenced by globalization, technology and mass media, which enable interaction and exchange between the world's different cultures. Contemporary culture is also characterized by pluralism, multiculturalism and hybridity, reflecting human identity's diversity and complexity. Today's Society faces various challenges and opportunities caused by the development of science, technology and information. Modern Society must also adapt to rapid and dynamic social, political and economic changes. By studying aspects of contemporary art, culture and Society, we can better understand ourselves and others. We can also appreciate the beauty, richness and uniqueness of every art, culture and Society in the world. One way to enrich your learning experience is to explore aspects of art, culture and Society in the modern world. This way, we can expand our horizons to different questions, phenomena and perspectives around us. In addition, we can develop critical, analytical and reflective thinking, which is needed in the era of globalization and digitization. These skills are essential for evaluating information, reasoning logically, and solving problems creatively. Therefore, we must take advantage of opportunities to learn from different sources and available media and interact with people from different backgrounds. In addition, studying aspects of art, culture and Society in today's world can increase our awareness of diversity, justice and human rights, which must be respected and protected. In this way, we can enrich our knowledge and experience and develop the critical and creative thinking necessary to face the challenges and opportunities of the globalization era. In today's world, art, culture and Society offer beauty, pleasure, wisdom, and inspiration to understand yourself and others better.

3.1.1 Studying aspects of contemporary art, culture, and Society is one of the ways to understand and appreciate the diversity and dynamism of the modern world.

Studying aspects of contemporary art, culture and Society in the modern era is one way to understand and appreciate the diversity and dynamism of today's world. By studying different works of art, cultural traditions and social phenomena occurring in different parts of the world, we can broaden our horizons and develop critical skills and a tolerant attitude towards diversity. In addition, this research can also provide inspiration and motivation to participate in the creation of creative solutions to the challenges facing modern Society, both locally and globally. One of the challenges facing contemporary art, culture and Society is how to produce relevant, critical and creative works to address the various changes and challenges in today's world. These works not only express themselves and the identity of the creators but are also a means of communication, education and influence that can positively impact the whole Society. Therefore, those active in contemporary art, culture and Society must have the knowledge, skills and attitudes that enable them to explore the diverse and dynamic aspects of the contemporary world locally and globally and collaborate with different parties. Creative process. In this way, they can understand and appreciate the diversity and dynamism prevailing in today's world and offer inspiration and innovations for the development of art, culture and modern Society in the future.

3.1.2 The artistic perspective includes various forms of creative expression that portray human values, identity and emotions, such as literature, music, visual arts, film and theatre.

The artistic side is an exciting and essential subject of study. The arts include various forms of creative expression that portray human values, identity, and emotions, such as literature, music, visual arts, film, and theatre. Art also influences culture, politics and Society. By exploring the perspectives of art, we can gain a deeper understanding of history, tradition and human civilization. Art can also provide inspiration, criticism and solutions to various problems. Therefore, works of art are a source of knowledge and wealth that must be treasured and preserved.

Figure 3. 1 Art [10]

The artistic side is one of human culture's broadest and most diverse areas. Art reflects how people express themselves, their values, identity and feelings through different media channels and genres. Art also has significant social, political, economic and aesthetic tasks in shaping Society and history. Some examples of artistic fields popular with people are literature, music, visual arts, film and theatre. Each aspect has its characteristics, customs and traditions that distinguish it from others. However, aspects of art also influence each other and are influenced by other aspects, resulting in rich and complex works of art. 3.1.3 Cultural aspects include various symbolic systems, norms and practices that shape how people live, think and interact in certain social groups, such as language, religion, customs and traditions. Cultural aspects are among the most important factors influencing people's behaviour in Society. Cultural aspects include the various symbolic systems, norms, and practices that shape how people live, think, and interact within certain social groups, such as language, religion, customs, and traditions. Cultural considerations can enrich the human experience but can also cause conflict or incompatibility with other cultures. Therefore, people need to understand and appreciate the different cultural aspects of this world. Cultural aspects of modern Society include many things, such as history, religion, art, language and traditions. In the era of globalization, technology is increasingly developing and promoting socio-cultural changes. We must be ready to face these changes. Modern culture is a culture where modernism affects people's lives. Modernity in the presence of cultural development can be seen in the change of local culture in the country, especially in Indonesia, which is heavily influenced by modern culture from outside.

Figure 3. 2 Social Groupl [11]

Culture is the result of human work, creativity, emotion and intention, manifested in various forms of expression, both material and immaterial. Culture reflects the learned, inherited and developed values, views and behaviour of members of Society. Culture also contains symbolic elements that allow people to communicate, share meaning, and create identity. Some critical cultural aspects are language, religion, customs and traditions.

3.1.4 Society includes the various structures, institutions and social relationships that influence and are influenced by human behaviour, attitudes and aspirations in historical, political, economic and environmental contexts such as family, education, media, law and government.

Social aspects is a broad and complex field of study that seeks to understand and explain social phenomena at various levels, from individuals to groups, organizations, communities, countries and the world. Society includes the various structures, institutions and social relationships that influence and are influenced by human behaviour, attitudes and aspirations in historical, political, economic and environmental contexts. An example of an aspect of Society is Family: A family is a basic social unit consisting of people related by blood, marriage or adoption. The family plays a vital role in shaping its members' identity, values, norms and social roles. The family is also a source of spiritual, financial and social support for its members. Education: Education is a formal or informal learning process to improve an individual's knowledge, skills and competence. Education is essential in preparing individuals to participate in Society, economy, political and cultural life. Education is also a means to develop the individual's potential and create opportunities for social mobility. Mass Media: Mass media is a medium used to convey information, entertainment, education, persuasion or propaganda to a large audience. The media significantly influences public opinion, social values, popular culture and consumer behaviour. The media is also a source of public information and education on various local, national and global issues. Law is a system of rules created and enforced by political authorities to regulate human behaviour in Society. The role of law is to maintain social order, protect the rights and interests of individuals and groups, resolve conflicts and disputes, and ensure justice and social welfare. Government: Government is a political institution that has the power to make public policy and regulate the country's affairs. The government has to satisfy the basic needs of Society, to protect national sovereignty and security, and to represent national interests in the international arena. The government also partners with several other political parties in dealing with various social challenges.

3.1.5 Modern times are characterized by rapid developments in science, technology, communication and globalization, which positively and negatively affect aspects of art, culture and modern Society.

The modern era is a historical period from approximately the 16th century. This era is characterized by extraordinary advances in various fields of science, technology, communication and globalization, which have changed the face of the world. However, this development also raises various challenges and issues that affect contemporary art, culture and Society. In this essay, I will discuss the positive and negative effects of the modern era on these three aspects. Modern developments in science, technology, communication and globalization have significantly affected various aspects of human life, including art, culture and modern Society. On the other hand, this development opens up opportunities for progress, creativity, collaboration and integration between different disciplines and cultures. On the other hand, this development also creates challenges, conflicts, inequalities and crises that threaten the existence and identity of people as social and cultural beings. That is why it is essential for us to understand and criticize the positive and negative effects of the development of the modern era on art, culture and modern Society and to look for solutions and alternatives to solve the problems arising from them.

4. Discussion

Contemporary art can be a means to express cultural identity and diversity and show a critical attitude towards social and political problems in Society. Public understanding of contemporary art still needs to be quantitatively higher, as does understanding of visual art's discussion and practice. One way to study culture is to study the aspects that shape it, such as history, religion, art, language and traditions. By studying these aspects, we can understand the different perspectives, values and ways of expression in a diverse and dynamic society. In addition, we can also appreciate the richness and diversity of the world's cultures and develop tolerance and empathy for other people. Understanding and respecting different cultures is very important to create cooperation and harmony between nations.

5. Conclusions

Contemporary art can be a means to express cultural identity and diversity and show a critical attitude towards social and political problems in Society. However, the public's perception of contemporary art still needs to be more prominent in quantity, as is the perception of the discussion and practice of visual art. One way to study culture is to study the aspects that shape it, such as history, religion, art, language and traditions. By studying these aspects, we can understand the different perspectives, values and ways of expression in a diverse and dynamic society. In addition, we can also appreciate the richness and diversity of the world's cultures and develop tolerance and empathy for other people. Understanding and respecting different cultures is crucial to creating cooperation and harmony between nations in the globalization era. One way to introduce contemporary art to the broader community is to organize specific events or programs that effectively increase the public's understanding of contemporary art.

References

[1] J. Robb "Art in Archeology and Anthropology: A Conceptual Review." Cambridge Archaeological Journal, 27 (2017)

[2] T. Anderson. "Art education for life." International Journal of Art and Design Education, 22 (2003)

[3] Spyros in Sifakaki. "Audiences for Contemporary Art." European Journal of Cultural Studies, 10 (2007)

[4] Jonathan Harris. "Globalization and Contemporary Art". (2011).

[5] MB. Rasmussen. "Art, Revolution and Communication." The third text, 26 (2012

[6] Dagomar Degroot. "Climate Change and Society in the 15th and 18th Centuries." Wiley Interdisciplinary Reviews: Climate Change, 9 (2018).

[7] J. Rentsch, Ioana Mot and A. Abbe. "Identifying the Core Content and Structure of a Cultural Understanding Diagram." (2009).

[8] Henk Roose, W. Roose and Stijn Daenekindt. "Trends in Contemporary Art Discourse: Using Thematic Models to Analyze 25 Years of Professional Art Criticism." Cultural Sociology, 12 (2018)

[9] Jonathan Harris. "Globalization and Contemporary Art". (2011)

[10]https://www.bumiayu.id/seni-rupa-modern-indonesia-tidak-lagi-berupa-simbol-simbol-yang-kaku-akan-tapi-lalu-merupakan.html

[11] https://www.gramedia.com/literasi/author/umam-m/page/4/